SOCIAL MEDIA IN BUSINESS #G4CSOCIAL

Are you a young professional, a recent graduate or a newcomer to the built environment industry?

Learn how to promote yourself, make connections that count and find the latest professional news and developments at the G4C Wales evening workshop.

Using social media is essential to keep up to date with the professional world today. Social media participation is a useful tool to network with professional contacts, connect with potential clients or employers and recruit new employees. There are over one billion active users of the different social media platforms around the world that could help your business grow or improve your job prospects

Emma Meese, an ex-BBC social media trainer will give an introduction to the use of social media and how the different sites will benefit you. The presentation will also cover personal profiles, professional conduct and privacy settings on LinkedIn and Twitter.
